

19
On Tuesday, January 1, 1788, will be published,

(PRICE ONE SHILLING)

No. I. of the

REPOSITORY;

A new periodical Work,

To be continued on the FIRST and SIXTEENTH of every Month;

CONTAINING

ORIGINAL PAPERS and ESSAYS.

MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES, domestic and foreign,
(including occasional accounts of valuable Publications).

PHILOSOPHICAL PAPERS and INTELLIGENCE.

AUTHENTIC STATE and other PUBLIC PAPERS, of every description.

OCCASIONAL REPORTS of LAW PROCEEDINGS.

REGULAR but SUMMARY ACCOUNTS of the DEBATES in both Houses of Parliament, in Great Britain and Ireland.

An ACCOUNT of POLITICAL and other INCIDENTS, domestic and foreign.

Various LISTS and TABLES, viz.

Of Publications at Home and Abroad;

Of the Rates of Exchange;

Of the Prices of the principal Funds in Europe,
of Bullion, Corn, and a few other essential articles of Commerce;

Of the Incidents of the Weather in various Countries.

TO collect and arrange what is scattered, to record what is fugitive, to select where choice is called for, to abridge what is voluminous, to excite individuals to produce what might otherwise never appear, and to exhibit the best ascertained account of facts before they cease to be interesting, are important services where the objects are valuable, and constitute the design of this Work.

Numerous Periodical Publications have appeared in this country during the present century, but all of them differing, more or less, from the present, in some essential particulars. The Table of Contents will shew, that the present undertaking respects a variety of objects and countries, and adds to the usual articles of periodical publications some hitherto neglected. The periods of its appearance are short enough to allow of some novelty, and distant enough to admit of some preparation and arrangement. Not confined to the labour, talents, or information of any one individual, a variety of persons, accustomed to different pursuits, and natives of different countries, are engaged in the support of it.

The Miscellaneous articles will often occupy a considerable share of this publication. This circumstance is particularly noticed, because, among other pieces of merit, many that are foreign will be inserted. These foreign pieces, (except poetry, where the translation may be difficult) will assume an English dress, and form a valuable acquisition.

The Philosophical part is certainly novel in this country. It will include accounts of discoveries, improvements, and undertakings in Astronomy, Mechanics, Chemistry, Electricity, and other branches of Natural Philosophy, in every quarter of the world. Where recent intelligence of this kind shall be wanting, some Historical, Theoretical, or Practical Dissertation on Philosophical subjects, will be inserted in a compendious form; or else an account be given of certain Philosophical matters, which, though not altogether new, may nevertheless be little known.

In the Political department, entire accuracy cannot be expected, for various reasons, which are sufficiently obvious. Industry, applied to a multitude of public channels of intelligence in different countries, will however afford such materials, as will enable experienced men to form some judgment in public affairs. No expence or trouble will be spared to procure authentic documents; and accident or friends may at times furnish additional articles.

It is needless to dwell on any other of the proposed objects of this plan. It is sufficient to say, what experience will afterwards decidedly prove, that this work is not dedicated to party. Care will be taken that nothing offensive to decency, morality, or religion, be inserted; and that it be liberally conducted in point of paper, printing, and other particulars.

On

On the whole, by this publication, the Politician and Historian will be furnished with useful documents commodiously assembled; and it is hoped that Philosophy will be assisted, and general knowledge and literary pursuits promoted by it; and that persons of every description, whether in public or private life, whether natives or foreigners, whether residing at home or abroad, will find it an acceptable, as well as an useful undertaking.

PUBLISHED by

C. DILLY, Poultry;
W. NICOLL, St. Paul's church
yard;

T. HOOKHAM, New Bond-
street;
J. and T. EGERTON, Whitehall.

N. B. SUBSCRIPTIONS for a year will be received at One Guinea each, and the Numbers regularly left at the places of residence of Subscribers, or where the Subscribers shall direct, in London.

